Sample Questions to Ask Employers

Below are a few sample questions you could ask a potential employer. Don't limit yourself to these questions. Instead, think about what you know about the school district, and ask questions related to your research of the district. Employers are very impressed when job seekers have researched their school and ask good questions.

How would you describe the culture of your district and schools?

What advice would you give to a new teacher considering your district?

What is the average class size in your schools?

Can you share more about the community your district serves?

What are your expectations for teachers regarding extracurricular involvement?

How does the school encourage and monitor students' progress?

How do teachers from your district include parents/guardians in their child's education?

In what ways do teachers collaborate?

Do you provide mentorship or support for first-year teachers?

Are there opportunities for professional development? If so, what do those look like?

What benefits do you offer (e.g., health insurance, retirement plans, tuition reimbursement)?

What is the next step I need to take to apply?

What are some other questions you could ask? Jot them down in the space below and review before walking up to the employer.
